ABOUT AGCO

AGCO is a leader in the design, manufacture and distribution of agricultural solutions. AGCO Limited sells agricultural machinery and equipment, which has been designed and manufactured within the AGCO group, to wholesale customers in the UK. Our ultimate parent company is AGCO Corporation which has its head office in the United States of America.

OUR GENERAL POLICIES ON SLAVERY AND HUMAN TRAFFICKING

We are committed to ensuring that there is no slavery or human trafficking in our supply chain or in any part of our business. We strive to protect and manage our own workforce and also collaborate with our suppliers to ensure that they support the same standards in terms of ensuring a safe, legal and healthy workforce.

Compliance within our own business

The AGCO Group Global Code of Conduct, which has been rolled out by AGCO Limited, is aimed at our internal business and contains a section which is dedicated to fostering a safe and respectful workplace.

Compliance within our supply chain

Our Supplier Code of Conduct, which mirrors the content of the Global Code of Conduct, establishes a foundation for the relationships that we create with our suppliers. This also contains a section which includes prohibitions on child labour, forced labour, dignity in the workplace, compliance with laws on working hours and compliance with laws regarding minimum wages. We require strict adherence to the Supplier Code of Conduct by our Tier 1 suppliers, any company within our supply chain and any entity which seeks to do business with us. We expect all such organisations to adopt and take aggressive measures to achieve the same level of conduct committed to by AGCO.

SUPPLIER ADHERENCE TO OUR ETHICS

To ensure all those in our supply chain and contractors comply with our ethics we require all potential suppliers to confirm compliance with our Supplier Code of Conduct.

TRAINING

We provide mandatory training to our workforce on the Global Code of Conduct to ensure adherence to all its principles. Completion of the training is a condition of engagement or employment at AGCO.

Mandatory Supplier Code of Conduct training is also provided to our workforce so that they are vigilant when visiting suppliers as well as understanding the best approach to address concerns.

REPORTING LINE

In the event that a supplier, sub-supplier, prospective supplier or any other person suspects any violation of our Global Code of Conduct or the Supplier Code of Conduct, they can report the suspected violation on an anonymous basis. Individuals working at AGCO can report their suspicions via the telephone, post or online via AGCO’s Alertline (an Alertline telephone number, postal address and webpage address is provided in the Global Code of Conduct).

STEPS WE HAVE TAKEN IN FINANCIAL YEAR ENDING 31 DECEMBER 2017 TO COMBAT SLAVERY AND HUMAN TRAFFICKING

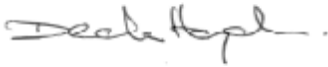

At the start of this year we sent out the questionnaire we prepared last year to the suppliers we had identified as operating in the top 20 countries where there is a high risk of slavery or human trafficking occurring. This questionnaire was designed to understand the level of those suppliers’ awareness of slavery and human trafficking, whether any instances of slavery or human trafficking had occurred within their own organisation or supply chain and what processes they had in place to combat slavery and human trafficking within their own organisation and their own supply chain. We have analysed the responses we have received back and the key theme was that we believe that suppliers do not properly understand concept of modern slavery. In order to address this we have created an email communication with a short summary of modern slavery and what it means, to increase knowledge of our suppliers and we intend to send this to our higher risk suppliers during the course of the financial year ending 31 December 2018, and any new suppliers thereafter. We are also continuing to chase suppliers who didn’t return our questionnaire back to us.
